

Salisbury Academy second-graders enjoy their own Greek Olympics

Sunday, November 23, 2008

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' 2nd graders studied the Greek Culture ending the study with olympics and a Greek meal. In the tug of war Cole Hayes in front, Reilly Ploplis, and Sarah Clifton can be seen pulling. photo by Wayne Hinshaw, Salisbury Post

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' 2nd graders studied the Greek Culture ending the study with olympics and a Greek meal. Sarah Clifton races down the court in the gym in the olympics competition in the class. photo by Wayne Hinshaw, Salisbury Post

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' 2nd graders studied the Greek Culture ending the study with olympics and a Greek meal. Zach Johnson throws the discus. photo by Wayne Hinshaw, Salisbury Post

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' 2nd graders studied the Greek Culture ending the study with olympics and a Greek meal. Cole Hayes rides a broom in the "horse race." photo by Wayne Hinshaw, Salisbury Post

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' 2nd graders studied the Greek Culture ending the study with olympics and a Greek meal. Reilly Ploplis does the standing long jump with Hayden Trayah waiting behind him. photo by Wayne Hinshaw, Salisbury Post

Salisbury Academy's Mary Lou Williams' second-graders studied the culture of the ancient Greeks, concluding with their own Olympics competition — in togas — and a Greek meal. In the top picture, Zach Johnson throws the discus. In the middle picture, Sarah Clifton races down the court in the gymnasium. In the tug of war at right, Cole Hayes, in front, Reilly Ploplis and Sarah Clifton can be seen pulling. The students also competed in 'chariot races,' using tricycles, and 'horse races,' by riding brooms. All the students wore wreaths of ivy at the special meal.

Photos by Wayne Hinshaw/Salisbury Post